A REMARKABLE CAMPAIGN.

The presidential campaign which was brought to its close with the casting of the ballots today is one of the most remarkable campaigns that has ever been fought in this country. The first remarkable thing was the nominations, both men being from Ohio, a circumstance unusual enough in itself to attract attention, and that was further increased by the coincidence that both nominees were engaged in the newspaper business, and both were holding effective offices at the time of their choice by the conventions. Another remarkable circumstance was the charges of Mr. Cox that the Republicans were attempting to buy the presidency. This sensation was sprung in regular newspaper style with a few new developments held back for successive days. His charges, afterwards proven to be without any foundation whatever, secured front page position in every newspaper of the country for many days.

The campaign was punctuated by the fight of the women for ratification by sufficient states to enable them to vote. They finally secured this right through the action of the Tennessee legislature after appealing to both candidates to take a hand in the fight. The leaders of both parties have evaded every opportunity during the campaign as to how the newly enfranchised women, numbering about 17,000,000, would cast their ballots. The vote in Maine was seized upon by the Republicans as evidence that a great majority of them would vote for Harding and Coolidge, while the Democrats attempted in every possible manner to minimize the result in that state. Today will tell which were right in their prediction.

The league of nations has been the big issue in the campaign. The doubt that has existed as to its meaning has caused thousands of people to espouse the Republican cause while thousands of other people are Republicans because they are absolutely convinced that the league of nations as constituted at present means the loss of the independence of the United States and its entanglement with European and Asiatic affairs.

Presidential campaigns are good things for the nation, even though they may seem tiresome to some people. They clarify the issues of the day through the discussion and the thought that is given to the various problems, and they show those who are placed in power just what the common people desire. If a party carries out this desire, it is returned, but if it fails, it is defeated in the next election. The present election has been remarkable for the discussions that have been brought out in support of the two major parties. That there has been more than the ordinary interest is shown by the attendance at political rallies, which has exceeded that of any former year, and from all indications the Republican ticket is going to be successful in almost all the communities of the nation.

SECRECY IN RADIO COMMUNICATION.

One of the greatest drawbacks to wireless telegraphy is its lack of secrecy. The ordinary systems of radio signalling are open to eavesdropping, and anyone with a suitable set of receiving apparatus can detect the signals and translate them. Some systems have overcome this objection to a slight extent through distinctive peculiarity of wave length and otherwise. It is now reported that William Marconi, the inventor of the radio system, believes that he has hit upon a principle which when fully perfected will insure the secrecy of messages transmitted over those systems which adopt the new principle. Successful demonstrations are said to have already taken place. Details of the invention are not divulged, but it may be said that an apparatus has been developed which propagates the electric wireless in a "beam" in any direction desired and only in that direction. The principle is called the "electric method of concentration."

With the methods now in general use, wireless waves sent out from stations spread in all directions and all who are provided with the necessary appliances can hear them. When the new invention shall have been perfected, it is thought that a wireless station will be able to send out telegraphic signals or telephonic conversations which will be heard only by those for whom they are intended. The new apparatus, which is being worked out in an experimental station in England in connection with Marconi's yacht cruising along the coast, has been inspected by a number of experts all of whom express the greatest interest in it. German radio engineers are also said to be devoting much time and attention to a system insuring secrecy. During the war the allied "eavesdroppers" on German wireless messages gathered much information concerning the movement of the Zeppelins. Both wireless telephones and wireless telegraphy will acquire much more importance than they now possess when secrecy of transmission has been secured and with experts such as are now devoting their attention to the problem, that time should not be far distant.

According to press dispatches, eight persons were killed in clashes during the election in Cuba yesterday. Nice quiet little time they have down in the island republic when they choose a new president.

Large placards urging workers not to vote but to strike were posted yesterday in New York. These were signed by the United Communist party. The time has come to rid this country of trash of this kind who do not believe in representative government and advise their followers not to do their duty in going to the polls and casting their votes.

The president is suspected to be preparing to plan to begin to consider introductory steps toward inaugurating an official movement for proposing a suggestion for the serious treatment of the project formulating for the recognition of Mexico. After some further watchful waiting he will probably write a note about it.

You notice, don't you, that liberty bonds go up in value as the election of a republican administration becomes nearer and more certain. Getting the government back on a basis of efficiency and economy will help the credit of the government, just as an individual's credit is helped by energy and thrift.

NEWSPAPER FILE COVERS 130 YEARS

By Associated Press

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 1.—The American Antiquarian society has come into possession of a file extending over 130 years of what is said to be the oldest newspaper in the English-speaking world, the London Gazette. The file runs from the first issue of the paper, which was started as the Oxford Gazette on November 14, 1665, through the year 1796.

President Waldo Lincoln, of the society, says the Gazette "in many cases is the sole source of information for material relating to the American colonies. During the Revolution it is, of course, also of value in presenting the English side of the conflict."
